Question 1

Muntu a 25-year-old unmarried staunch Christian, is admitted to the medical ward with severe abdominal pain, normal temperature, pallor, profuse sweating and hypotension. She is also having blood loss per vagina. She is accompanied by her best lady friend, also a staunch Christian. They have been friends since childhood. The doctor examined Muntu with a student nurse and Muntu's female friend present. Neither the nurse nor the doctor had asked the patient if it was alright to have her friend and student nurse present during her examination and history taking. Muntu was diagnosed with ectopic pregnancy. The nursing staff was told to prepare her for theatre. Muntu's parents arrived in the hospital while she was in theatre, wanting to know what was going on with their daughter. When told by nurses and their daughter's friend that Muntu was in theatre having an operation for an ectopic pregnancy, her father walked out of the ward but her mother collapsed on the floor weeping saying Muntu had disgraced the family.

What are the ethical issues involved in this scenario?
